

Hospital Visit

We got word that Solvem had been admitted to a hospital, but by the time we got there we just found this journal entry and a doctor's notes. We've cross-referenced the other patients but it doesn't look like any of them gives us cause for concern, but they do seem to have something in common.

Witness: Ali Crane

Floor	Pt Name	Note
4	R. Smith	Family needs to be educated about their daughter's new diabetes diagnosis (age 9)
2	A. Dorfman	Must take her medicine before eating
3	K. Johnson	Make sure his bandages are changed twice a day
3	J. McBride	Get Measles, Mumps &amp; Rubella Immunization before discharge from hospital
1	S. Hwang	Consultation w/ Ears, Nose &amp; Throat Dr.
1	G. Williamson	Most recent temperature was 98.6
2	E. Feldman	Verify that blood is cross-matched
1	V. Divi	May have been exposed to Yellow Fever!!
3	B. Hall	Shark bite w/ a below the knee amputation.
3	E. Perdomo	Research possibility of atherosclerotic cardiovascular disease
3	M. Cabrera	Increased LR to 250 drops per minute
1	S. Wolf	Decreased peripheral vision in left eye
2	B. Wallace	Can be given his anti-emetic meds rectally

All this running from PI3 is wearing me down! Last night I had some terrible chest pain and I took myself to a very small, local hospital hoping no one there would know me. I was admitted to the hospital and given and IV, an MRI, and an EKG. To make it even more unpleasant, they told me I was NPO! While waiting for my CXR in the ED, a particularly strange and frazzled intern examined me and dropped his patient list on the floor on his way out. As an ex-medical intern myself, I know these personal medical to-do lists always hold clues and I have to keep a close watch on those around me.